In 1955, Lt. General Lewis Burwell "Chesty" Puller retired from the United States Marine Corps to Saluda, Virginia.

Today, the Middlesex Museum and Historical Society, sits just miles from the General's retirement home and final resting place at Christ Church Parish. The museum is PROUD to house the original PULLER PARK MEMORIAL on it's property.

"PULLER PARK" will stand as a lasting honor to Chesty's legacy.

"In the Marine Corps, your buddy is not only your classmate or fellow officer, but he is also the Marine under your command. If you don't prepare yourself to properly train him, lead him, and support him on the battlefield, then you're going to let him down. That is unforgivable in the Marine Corps." – Chesty Puller
